In response to the restriction requirement, Applicants elect Group I, claims 1-25 for examination. Claims 26-28 are withdrawn for consideration.

The legends in the drawings are not legible. Correction is requested.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Allison (USP 6,373,848).

See at least the abstract and Figure 1 in Allison. Allison teaches a method and apparatus (multi-port adapter) of receiving data from a network (see lines 35-42 of column 2), comprising:

Issuing a receive request directing a transfer of data from one of a plurality of device ports (see port selector) to a buffer memory (see registers or FIFOs) and specifying instructions (line 58 of column 2) to process the data.

Allison does not explicitly state specifying a thread from among a plurality of processing program threads to process the data. However, Allison teaches specifying instructions from a plurality of instructions to process the data. One of ordinary skill in the art should readily recognize that a program is constructed of plurality of instructions which are organized or grouped into subroutines or threads in accordance with their functions such as interrupt subroutine, word processing subroutine or I/O subroutine.

Selecting from a thread among a plurality of threads is nothing more than selecting a subroutine and the instructions therein among a plurality of subroutines.

With respect to the ~~1~~ independent claims, interlock signals for controlling the transfer of data from one device to another are well known in the art. See the description of the state registers in the abstract.
